About the Program

The global pandemic is rapidly changing how health care is delivered—and how health care professionals lead through a crisis. To position their organization for success, global health care leaders must stay up to date on the latest management skills and resource—from strategic management, hospital information technology and human resource incentives to organizational structure, financial management and emergency preparedness.

Leadership in Medicine: Southeast Asia (LIM:SEA) program provides training to emerging health care leaders in Malaysia, Southeast Asia, Australia and the Asia-Pacific region.

Program Format

Our year-long program employs an innovative, interactive model of blended-learning that combines live teaching with recorded online lecture material.

This hybrid-learning approach includes:

- 3 multi-day intensive residential workshops
- 8-10 interactive webinars
- 41 self-paced online lectures
- Team project
- Individual capstone project
